Building Awareness: Women's Eye Health and Safety

Eydie Miller-Ellis, MD

Women make up two-thirds of the more than 3.4 million Americans age 40 and older who are visually impaired. Early detection and treatment are the best ways to preserve vision. As important eye care health providers, we need to gain a greater understanding of the key diseases and eye conditions that affect women's eye health and safety. This course will review facts about women's vision, identify major diseases affecting women's vision, assess trends in eye care, and identify our role in patient education and building awareness.
